

THASSILONIAN SPECIALIST DEDICATION

FEAT 2

UNCOMMON

ARCHETYPE

DEDICATION

Archetype Thassilonian specialist

Prerequisites Intelligence 16, ability to cast arcane spells

By dedicating yourself to studying the magical mysteries of ancient Thassilon, you specialize in a school of magic at the cost of neglecting two other schools of magic.

You become trained in Arcana and in Thassilon Lore; if you were already trained, you become an expert instead.

Choose a school of magic. This must be the same as your arcane school if you are a specialist wizard. Add a cantrip and a 1st-level spell from this school of magic to your spellbook or spell repertoire. Your arcane school also determines two opposition schools for later feats: these are evocation and necromancy for abjuration, abjuration and enchantment for necromancy, enchantment and illusion for transmutation, necromancy and transmutation for enchantment, conjuration and transmutation for illusion, evocation and illusion for transmutation, and abjuration and conjuration for evocation.

You also gain a value for your Thassilonian specialization, which increases as you select more feats from this archetype. Your Thassilonian specialization is now equal to 1.

Whenever you cast an arcane spell from your opposition schools, including from a scroll, wand or staff, you must succeed a flat check or the spell has no effect. The DC of the flat check is equal to the value of your Thassilonian specialization. A value of 1 means you automatically succeed. If the value of your Thassilonian specialization ever reaches or exceeds 20, then Arcane spells from your opposition schools are prohibited to you, and you cannot prepare or cast these spells, not even from a scroll, wand or staff.

Special You cannot select another dedication feat until you have gained two other feats from the Thassilonian specialist archetype.
